About me

Hailing from the frozen steppes of Siberia (no, seriously), my family and I relocated to Australia in the mid 90s on the coast in Wollongong. After falling in love with the ocean and sunshine, our family moved once again, this time to Melbourne. After attempting to study Architecture at Melbourne University, I realised a less stable, and more chaotic life in film was what I really wanted. Finding my way to the Victorian College of the Arts I studied Film and TV, satiating my deep love for cinema that started early with my father taking me to the cinema to see Wizard of Oz, as well as watching bad Russian dubs of Empire Strikes Back and The Good, The Bad and The Ugly. Since then I've dived head long into the Film and TV industry, gaining experience in camera, lighting, assistant directing, and sound, before establishing myself in locations and production. Having an insatiable appetite for making films, I continued to produce short films and music videos, while juggling my jobs in the industry, with several winning awards and being screened at renowned international festivals like Fantasia, Palm Springs, and ShortShorts to name a few. These creative outputs culminated in receiving Screen Australia funding for a proof of concept short film as well as development funding for a feature script. I now reside in Sydney, where I'm able to balance my love of cinema, with my love of surfing, tennis, and the outdoors. I work as a freelance Producer, Fixer and Production Manager, with more than 10 years of experience in TV advertising production across Australia.
